On the eve of a controversial speech promising to challenge conventional scholarship and change the understanding of the historic Lewis and Clark Expedition, former university president, Parker Williams, discovers the body of the presenter near Old Faithful Geyser in Yellowstone National Park. Enlisted by the FBI to assist in the investigation of the murder, Parker finds himself confronted by a confusing series of contradictory findings. From the inner workings of higher education to the uncertainty of a diary written by a member of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, the search for the killer brings Parker face-to-face with ethical dilemmas. All proceeds from the sale of this book are donated to two charities: Compassion International and Habitat For Humanity.
