Do Happy Better: A Workshop Playbook David L. White

Do Happy Better is a Workshop Playbook where the user will record the plays that work in their own experience. More value can be squeezed from self-help and motivational books when one acts as student accountable to oneself rather than external authority figures. This is mindfulness with a pencil. This is time to oneself. There is a persistent idea that some of this simple technology can be advanced in small journaling, writing, and/or accountability groups. This workbook model will be offered in such groups. If one is able to work/play on their own this workbook will move the user closer to their own true self. The author is exploring potential need and viability of a listening and accountability service F2F, Skype or phone.
